Introduction

This document accompanies the notice (included in Appendix A) of the intention to relocate memorials at the Old Stuckton Chapel graveyard, near Fordingbridge. It provides background information and details of the plans, including proposals for relocating a limited number of memorials on the site.

A Brief History

The congregational chapel in Stuckton was opened on Tuesday the 16th of September 1856; its establishment was through the determined efforts of the Reverend Thomas Grant, a non-conformist preacher with a flair for rallying support. After being evicted from an earlier chapel site in Hungerford – despite it having been gifted to him – Grant turned his attention to Stuckton. With donations from across England and even as far as India, he secured the land and oversaw the construction of the new chapel. Reverend Grant himself is buried in the graveyard.

The Chapel flourished for 150 years, with a regular attendance of 85-100 documented in the early 20th century, and over 300 on special occasions such as the 1956 centenary celebration. Over the later part of the last century and the start of the 21st, like many churches, the congregation diminished, and regular services sadly ceased in 2016.

In common with many congregational churches, in 2004 the trustees of the Stuckton Chapel recognised the challenges with continuing to hold the Chapel in trust themselves and decided that the trusteeship would be transferred to the Evangelical Fellowship of Congregational Churches (EFCC). The EFCC Trust Corporation plays an important practical role in supporting a vision of ‘exalting Christ and growing healthy churches’. The Trust Corporation acts as a corporate trustee for many churches and handles the legal and financial matters that underpin the spiritual work of the fellowship.

Following the cessation of regular services, alternative uses were sought for the chapel. This included being used as the base for the Stuckton Adventure Centre, who gained planning permission in 2018 to convert the chapel into a Christian Outdoor Centre, incorporating replacement of the rear and side extensions as part of a significant improvement to the building. Ultimately this reuse was not viable, and the Chapel and the building was placed on the open market in 2024.

Future Intentions

The redundant Chapel and surrounding land have been purchased in 2025 by a local couple, who are keen to preserve the heritage and respect the past of the Chapel building and the graveyard, whilst bringing the building back into use – transitioning it to a new long term sustainable future. If possible, their goal is to gain planning permission to change the use to a single residential property, for occupancy by them and their family.

Whatever the future of the building, it is important that the graveyard is treated with reverence and respect, and that the remains and memorials contained within it are protected. The proposals laid out in this document aim to deliver exactly that, through a carefully considered scheme to create two defined, fenced off, graveyard areas and moving a limited number of memorials, creating a separate open space that can be used in association with the future use of the building. Critically, the intention, plan and proposals are that:

- No remains are to be disturbed – only the memorials are to be relocated.
- No buildings will be erected on any ground previously used for burials.
- The changes are to enable both hard and soft landscaping of the resulting space, in association with the future use of the building.
- All the memorials will be in two dedicated graveyard areas, maintained by the owners and open to the public.

This document is designed to support the legal aspects of the proposed change, and to demonstrate a respectful and considerate handling of the graveyard.

Status of the Graveyard

Being a non-conformist church, the graveyard is not consecrated ground administered under the faculty jurisdiction of the Church of England; nor is it local authority owned like the newer area on the eastern side of the Stuckton Cemetery further along Stuckton Road, nearer Fordingbridge. It is therefore a private burial ground, on private property. From a legal perspective, the key relevant legislation is the Disused Burial Grounds (Amendment) Act 1981, itself an act to amend the Disused Burial Grounds Act 1884.

Before marketing the redundant church, during the summer of 2024 the EFCC went through the process of closing the burial ground, and seeking associated representations from the public, particularly those still visiting graves.

During the closure process, graves in two parts of the graveyard were recognised as still being actively visited; the EFCC has retained ownership of the land in these areas to ensure enduring access. Thus, while the new owners own the unrestricted freehold of most of the site and all the building, they have a long lease for the two parts of the cemetery retained by the EFCC, with associated controls on its use.

The following map shows the overall site marked by the red line, with the two leasehold areas (and thus retained by the EFCC) of graveyard marked in blue.

High Level Proposal

The new owners are keen to preserve the heritage of the chapel building and the graveyard, and ensure enduring respect is shown for both those interred in the burial ground, and those who wish to visit. With the scattered nature of the memorials around the property, this does create a challenge to provide suitable open space to allow the building to be brought back into use and ensuring it has a long-term sustainable future.

The proposal is thus to relocate a limited number of memorials from sparsely used parts of the graveyard to two larger designated and dedicated areas, which can be set aside and opened to the public. These would be based on significantly extending the existing areas leased from the EFCC, to incorporate additional land of the new owners.

This will create two graveyards that contain all the memorials, that are open to the public, maintained by the new owners, and directly accessible via dedicated gates from the public footpath to the north of the property. The building and its immediately surrounding land would thus not contain any memorials and can be hard and soft landscaped in line with the new use of the building.

It is planned and explicitly intended that no remains will be disturbed. Specifically, only the particular memorials outside of the proposed areas will be relocated into the areas.

No buildings will be erected on any of the ground that has been used for burials. The changes are to enable the use of the resulting space for the future use of the building, limited to hard and soft landscaping, and associated fencing or similar.

The resulting two graveyard areas will be fenced, forming clearly defined graveyard areas. The target is also to include an ‘interpretation board’ in the larger of the two areas, providing history of the chapel for visitors.

It is intended that this will provide both a well maintained and generous area for both locals and visiting relatives to access, visit the memorials, and see the graveyard in the context of the chapel building and its heritage. This proposal ensures that access is easy, simple and separated from the future use of the building.

The following map shows the overall site marked, with the two proposed graveyards areas containing all the memorials, marked in purple.

Process

The movement of the memorials and associated changes to the burial grounds are governed by the Disused Burial Grounds (Amendment) Act 1981. The new owners are committed to ensuring the community are engaged in the future of the building and graveyard, and keen to demonstrate they are actively seeking to maintain the heritage and treat all graves with the reverence and respect they deserve.

Representations should be made within 2 months of the notice, 31st October 2025. Whilst these are intended to be from personal representatives or relatives of the deceased commemorated by these memorials, all representations will be considered.

Detailed Plan

The following plan underpins the proposal and is used to define the memorials affected by the change. The graveyard has been categorised into the following areas:

Area	Map Colour	Proposal
A	Dark Purple	Unchanged and accessible – EFCC retained graveyards.
B	Light Purple	Newly defined and accessible graveyards – existing memorials unchanged, moved memorials relocated to these areas.
C	Blue	Minor changes – memorials are rotated 180 degrees and moved 1.8m or less, to form part of newly defined graveyards.
D	Green	Memorials removed from this space and relocated to 'B' areas.

These areas are defined in the following map:

The memorials primarily affected by this proposed change are in the areas marked D. These are currently sparsely spread, and the removal of these memorials to the other (B) areas allows the creation of open space that can be used in association with the future use of the building. Ultimately no memorials will remain in the areas marked D, with each one carefully moved to new locations in the nearby graveyard areas marked B.

Five memorials are in the area marked 'C', which will form the edge of the new and open graveyard areas. These will each be rotated 180 degrees so they face within the new graveyard, rather than in their current orientation in which they would be unreadable up against the new fence for the graveyards. They will also be moved up to 1.8 meters to ensure they are fully within the newly defined graveyard areas.

No memorials in areas A or B will be affected by these changes.

All work to move the memorials will be carried out with due care and respect, ensuring they are preserved and their condition improved wherever possible. This will include ensuring all are suitably fixed upright in a secure and safe fashion.

To reiterate, no remains will be disturbed.

On a case-by-case basis, unmarked kerb stones may be set aside; this is described in detail on a per memorial basis in the next section.

Memorial Details

The following table lists the details of each individual memorial that will be moved as part of these proposals. Column 1 is the memorial number for this proposal, also used to label locations on the map following the table. Column 2 a locator reference that relates to a previous survey by Hampshire Genealogical Society in 2009; where the inscriptions are now illegible, the records from this survey have been used.

25	C-C-1		Inscription: Jennifer Motie 1938 – 2009 Beloved mother, sister, nana, aunt and friend Additional Notes: This memorial was found with kind help of the Motie family; it is flush with the ground level, but easily overgrown. We are actively discussing with the family the best future location for this memorial.

AREA D – TO REAR OF CHAPEL

9	B-A-1	 A photograph showing a low, rectangular stone structure almost completely hidden by dense, overgrown vegetation. The ground around it is uneven and covered in moss and small plants.	Inscription: In memory of Albert J. Scammell 1898-1962 Additional Notes: The memorial is heavily overgrown, and the kerbstones are unlevel and separated in places. It is adjacent to existing drainage systems including the septic tank. With no headstone, the inscription is on the kerbstones; the proposal is to relocate the kerbstones in the current configuration, with a stone infill.
10	B-B-0	 A photograph of a rectangular stone memorial. The top part is a decorative cast shape that includes the letters 'RIP'. Memorial Locations

The following map shows the existing location of each individual memorial that would be moved as part of these proposals. The numbers reflect those in the first column in the above table.

The final position of memorials following the proposed moves area not yet confirmed, other than being within the defined areas described in the diagrams. The positioning of individual memorials in their new areas will be based on either representations from relatives, or else in a manor to maximise their accessibility and visibility.

Addendum – Additional Memorial – 8th October 2025

An additional memorial has been uncovered to the rear of the chapel, buried under the soil for a significant period. This is not included in any of the previous surveys of memorials, including the comprehensive 2009 Hampshire Genealogical Society Survey. The proposal is to move this memorial (along with the others at the rear of the chapel as previously described) to the area marked 'B' on the map, adjacent to the Commonwealth War Grave. The details of the memorial are as follows:

#	Ref:	Picture	Inscription & Notes

When relocated, the proposal is to site it slightly proud of ground level to ensure it does not get lost/covered again.
